

Access Doors for Underground Egress

Los Angeles, California

A new 8.5-mile, $2.058 billion rail line is being constructed in Los Angeles, California. The project includes several underground stations, where access doors have been installed to meet NFPA codes for emergency egress (Source: Photos by Dan Arnold, February 2018).

